

ORIGIN AND AIMS OF THE SOCIETY

The Senglea Historical Society is a non governmental organisation (NGO) that was established in Senglea in 2009.

The society originated when a group of people from this city that have the history of this locality at their heart discussed how the cultural and natural heritage, that has connotations with Senglea, can be protected and restored as needed. Some time has passed and this group decided that a society, with a proper statute and officially registered as a NGO, should be formed.

The aims of the society are to:

- identify the cultural and natural heritage.
- promote the appreciation of the cultural and natural heritage in collaboration with the authorities.
- recommend to the authorities measures and level of protection to cultural and natural heritage.

SENGLA CITY

Senglea, or as it is currently recognised by the Government of Malta, Isla, is a city in which we find a considerable amount of cultural heritage which deserves appropriate protection; this, notwithstanding that along the course of time a significant amount of patrimony was lost because of various factors including World War II.

Among the historical buildings we find, three churches, bastions, il-Maċina, the Dockyard Terrace, various houses in which lived people who made honour to Senglea and even to Malta, and others.

This City also presented various personalities that held high the City's name, as well as that of Malta. Infact we find a number of streets named after them.

SO THAT SENGLA REMAINS SENGLA

What are we going to do to protect this City? It is required that all those who hold this City, cultural and natural heritage at their heart and every Senglean should collaborate so that Senglea is protected as it deserves. Senglea managed to be victorious every time it faced some sort of threat, and now it is time that the honour of this historical City is given the deserved attention.

This Society has been set so that those who are interested in this aim and so that there is coordination. Thus we urge you that you do not remain passive but carry a part of this responsibility, whether you are Senglean or as a person living in Senglea. Join us so that we all work towards the achievement of this aim.

This society is autonomous, democratic and without any political bias.

SOCIETY'S EMBLEM

The emblem consists of two "S", one of which is laterally inverted. Between them there is an "H". These are the initials of the society's name. The orange symbolises a worthy ambition. In the top there is the coat of arms of Claude de la Sengle with a prince's crown. In the lower part there is a stork with one foot held high holding a stone, symbolising vigilance.
